Burial followed in the church cemetery. Foreman Funeral Home directing; "The Covington News" 27 JAN 1944, front page-WHO WAS THIS MAN? In James Stewart's latest book, Taps for Private Tussia, we are given a story based upon the fact that they used the wrong corpse when they thought they were burying Clem Tussie. Following is a story of a man who gave his name as James Wilson FRANKLIN, and who was identified by his brother who lives in Montgomery as the true James Wilson FRANKLIN, and who died at the welfare home here in Andalusia and who was buried at Fairmount Church, Red Level, Monday, and, following the funeral who should turn up in Andalusia but the real James Wilson FRANKLIN. Here is the story related by the Foreman Funeral Home's Manager: Several weeks ago a man came to Andalusia and gave his name as Mr. GREEN. He was a sewing machine mechanic (he claimed), he was taken ill at Keys Boarding House and Mrs. Dell O'NEAL HART was called. She sent him to a local hospital were he stayed for several weeks. Mrs. HART later moved him to the Welfare Home on Dunson Street, where he was visited by a number of people and some of them identified him as James Wilson FRANKLIN and he admitted that was his name. Mrs. HART spent a large sum of money trying to find his people, but all in vain. He died Sun. morning at 1 o'clock. FRANKLIN's only brother lived in Montgomery, and he came Sunday and identified the man as his brother. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at Fairmount Church in Red Level. Late Monday afternoon James Wilson FRANKLIN showed up in Andalusia. He was asked if he was not dead and buried Monday afternoon and he said H No. So Mrs. HART is busy trying to find out who was buried Monday at Fairmount. Foreman Funeral Home directing."
